Yes, and we're working on it. Our partner's deep learning technology automatically learns and makes impressions of celebrity voices without any human training. The technology isn't perfect yet, but we're getting there. With your support, we will continue to work until the voices are edging away from the human voice. We are also working on real-time voice changer technology in cooperation with our partner. Our technology allows you to change your voice, not just disguise your voice or change your voice to an FX string that makes it sound like a monster or a chipmunk.*Can you make a particular celebrity voice? Yes. We can make any voice. Our partner's technology learns to make impressions of people by listening to tens of thousands of hours of human speech. We use a proprietary neural network that turns a human voice into a voice font, or text into a speech voice. In order to make impressions, we need sound to create voice impressions of celebrities. We will soon make our partner community available on our website and upload any voice views we can use to create a voice.*If it's a voice How does it only work in English? Our basic technology uses speech recognition and voice cloning to output a parody of the celebrity voice impression. It's only available in English right now.Do you support other languages? Yes, but we haven't built support into our app yet. If we continue to get demand, we'll build it. Why video instead of just audio? Our partner wants their tag to be tied to our app so the video has a watermark.* Can I take audio from the video and use it for (insert use case here)? We may grant you the right to share video anywhere in its original form. You can then post to any social network, or send it in SMS or email, but you can't edit, reverse engineer or edit the resulting video without written consent. This includes extracting audio from our video output. For licensing questions and key API requests, please contact us and we'll connect you to our voice technology partner.
